International Space Station From the Associated Press: The International Space Station will be able to carry out repairs to damaged electronics on station as early as this summer, NASA announced Wednesday. "The Astrocyte is a state-of-the-art repair module that would be used for chronic (e.g., long-term) and intermittent damage on ISS," said James Reuther, NASA's International Space Station program manager in a statement. "The Astrocyte will be a revolutionary element of ISS, allowing ISS users to repair system components better than ever before." The Astrocyte concept... From the Associated Press: Russia will try out a new way to control the International Space Station Friday, using cameras and touchscreen interfaces on a mockup of the station's robotic arm to help a human operator remotely operate the arm, according to a report. The arm, known as the Special Purpose Dexterous Manipulator or SPDMM, will be used this Friday on the mockup platform at the Star City cosmodrome outside Moscow to develop its capabilities and make sure it works as intended, the Interfax news agency reported. If successful, the system will be tested on the space station next month,... A team of NASA flight controllers and Russian cosmonauts filled in a gap in space station operations Saturday by ordering two Russian Soyuz spacecraft to dock with the space station. That brings the station's staff to six, with another three aboard a Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency space shuttle scheduled to fly to the space station Tuesday. US astronaut... Q: What is the optimal spacing for a frame? Some of the options for a frame: Thin MDF Thick MDF Wood Sawtooth Black varnished MDF I know that MDF is cheaper than wood and can be painted, or stained, or even changed to a different colour. But what are the pros and cons of each? A: Thin MDF is often painted to look like wood, with the grain of the wood showing through. If you paint it it's no longer MDF, and is therefore not suitable for electrical wiring. Thick MDF is usually finished so that you can't see the wood grain. It's not suitable for electrical wiring because the wiring won't be trapped in the thicker part of the MDF. Wood is weather resistant, and durable. It's usually painted with multiple coats of a nice glossy exterior paint. It has a lot of character, so it appeals to people. Saw tooth is often used for framing pictures and posters. Many people think of saw-tooth frames as shabby, but they're great for pictures with a lot of text and images on them. They're also great for posters. I have two posted on my wall that are on the saw-tooth style. Twitter app for Linux?
