I am incredibly excited." One of the most important things Libby said she learned from the fellowship is that a leader's job is to be the "connector." It's not about being the smartest, best, or strongest. It's about being the one that pulls together the material the other people are presenting, which in turns helps bring the audience along. "I learned that I can't control what I get asked to do and say," Libby said. "I have to be able to accept the invitation. I have to be flexible and accommodating to others' ideas and beliefs. I have to be humble. I have to seek feedback." Now the
