When I log into my Raspberry Pi, I have to run a command like sudo init 6 every time after I log in. It stops the GUI from loading, and after some time it gives me the login screen again, which I can now make it to not fail when I log in. This is a bit of a hassle though, since I always have to make sure to wait a few minutes before I log in. How can I not have to do this at all? A: Usually sudo init 6 will not prevent the GUI from loading. The GUI (Gnome Desktop) is a client for the X Window system. There are other client programs, too, and you can switch between them using the "Switch to another virtual terminal" in the Session & Startup menu. 0 Member(s) so far Not downloading for many reasons: 1) cannot find it on my account.. 2) there is no crack due to firewall on my computer 3) there is no Linux version. 4) no mac version, again no crack. 5) "Copy protection" 6) I guess many other Linux users are in the same situation. 7) "Taban " So just a quick question, is this game ever going to have a mac version? It would be very VERY easy to make, I can find the code, it's just a matter of programming a mac variant of Dreamgame2 and to autoplaying the download for me. I play this and it's awesome, but I have two cats and they tend to throw up on my computer screen. This makes it incredibly annoying to focus on. Is it possible to play as an adult male Ranna? I could get behind him but my cat (and multiple friends) can't.
