Effect of radiation on colony-forming units in human bone marrow. Using the soft agar technique, the effects of radiation on colony-forming units (CFU) in the bone marrow of patients treated with megavoltage X-rays and neutrons were studied. Sixty-three episodes of acute leukemia were studied in 30 patients; bone marrow and peripheral blood samples were examined within 24 hours and again after intervals up to two years. The patients were first treated with combined (total body) irradiation between 250 and 500 rads (average dose rate 0.5 to 0.8 rad/minute) at least three months prior to the study. Twelve patients received whole body radiation of a dose as low as 100 rads as remission therapy. There was no significant difference in the numbers of CFU present in the bone marrow of patients when they were studied 24 hours following total body irradiation compared to controls. The CFU of patients treated with neutrons prior to the marrow studies showed a biphasic response with a relative decrease in CFU soon after irradiation and a subsequent increase. The data suggest that the change in bone marrow CFU is dependent on the dose and dose rate of irradiation rather than the total dose of radiation.:44 I was studying at the university and it was the same thing. They said this is normal people too. I was mostly concerned about the thickness of the skin but I think it is normal. I was so fortunate that I got his number but I do not want to go out with him cause I didn't want to be cheated like my first boyfriend. I don't want my friends to get the same experience. She said I was a good friend to my friends but I was cheated and I was so sad about it. I had to look for another person.

7. Interview with a potential date Next step is to ask for the very important and the first question "How are you doing?" According to the study, the majority of the participants stated they asked that very important question first. You want to know how your date wants to be treated. Your mother and aunt are right when they tell you to ask a question before everything else. In most cases, if a person does not know how to answer a question, he or she will not be able to answer the questions you ask. And that brings a very important question to my mind. "What are your hobbies?" A lot
