4.3.11 but no install button...and when i try to install it nothing happens..i can't even find a install button in the program. Docker Pull Command. Owner. profile apakFON. Why Docker. and more programs to support. windows,. Docker Pull Command. Why Docker. hi there linux user,. still no sign of the install button or the install option in the program. I want to install the program, but it doesn't seem to be working. When i click on the program's install button, nothing happens. When i click on the install button in the program's main menu, a window appears. Here's a screenshot of that window: NOTE: i have already uninstalled and removed the program before installing. I have tried installing, using Linux, and all other methods i know of to install am i doing something wrong, or is my computer just stupid? ps: if the problem can be solved on windows, it will be an absolute pleasure. A: You're trying to run an application that's in a non-GPL software distribution as a GPL-licensed one. You're trying to install the non-GPL non-commercial version on a Linux system that runs a GPL-licensed version of Linux. In that case, no, you cannot simply run your non-GPL non-commercial software on a GPL-licensed version of Linux. At all. This is also true if you try to force the GPL-licensed version of Linux to run your non-GPL non-commercial software. You really need to set up your system in such a way that you can run both. Note that you can still run your non-GPL non-commercial version of Linux in your non-GPL non-commercial version of Linux, you just can't use one piece of GPL software together with your non-GPL non-commercial version of Linux. Note that you don't need to support running both pieces of software as long as it's only you who uses both of them. It's not that easy to get the rights to run both under one single license, since you would have to prove that you're the only one who runs both programs, and since the license only states that you can run the non-commercial version and not the commercial one. This is a similar situation to the Steam Linux client: You cannot run both.
